Crisis management - Wikipedia
Crisis management is the process by which an organization deals with a disruptive and unexpected event that threatens to harm the organization or its stakeholders. The study of crisis management originated with large-scale industrial and environmental disasters in the 1980s. It is considered to be the most important process in public relations. Three elements are common to a crisis:

Emergency Management during COVID-19 Pandemic:

Emergency Management and Crisis Intervention

Crisis intervention theory attempts to empower an individual or party that is currently undergoing a crisis situation by helping them to viable solutions that can help ameliorate the problems causing extreme tension and stress. Social workers will have to utilize principles of crisis intervention theory for many different crises. Crisis management research has yet to systematically explore the real-time discourse and information exchange that occurs between an organization and its stakeholders as they make sense of a crisis.
